1 Bring comfy shoes as the Garden District has a lot to offer. Walk through some of the nation's most beautiful neighborhoods and learn about the mansions and lavish gardens on St. Charles Avenue and the fine-dining restaurants and casual cafes along Magazine Street. Speaking of which, at .NEXT, you will be offered many different ways to run multiple workloads on Nutanix! Deploy and scale your critical tier-one workloads, such as Microsoft SQL Server, Oracle databases, SAP business applications and more, on a simplified enterprise cloud platform.

4 A historic park in the French Quarter, Jackson Square is where the Louisiana Purchase was made doubling the size of the United States. If you want to double your knowledge, dive deep into the product with Nutanix engineers, industry veterans, NPXs, VCDXs, NTCs, MVPs, and CCIEs.

2 Don't miss this stop to discover how New Orleans changed the strategy of World War II via Higgins Industries. At .NEXT, among our 60+ hand-picked sessions, you'll shape your own strategy and learn about modernizing architectures, automation, data protection, networking, security, machine learning, and much, much more.

5 This is where the first opera in the U.S. was performed in the 1790s. The .NEXT stage might not have sopranos, but we guarantee our industry-leading speakers, including Nutanix Founder, Chairman & CEO Dheeraj Pandey and research professor Brene Brown, will change the way you think about IT.

3 The open air market spanning six blocks in the French Quarter, consists of cafés, bars, Cajun and Creole delicacies, desserts, and much more. Still not full? At .NEXT 2018, we'll be serving up an unforgettable keynote from irreverent food personality Anthony Bourdain.

6 No need to worry about running between buildings and missing keynotes, breakouts, or events. This convention center has everything you need in its 1.1 million square feet of contiguous exhibit space. Bring comfortable shoes, tackle your action-packed day, and then unwind with an epic Mardi Gras party you'll still be talking about on the plane home.
